WALTER G. SMITH PASSES AWAY IN COAST HOSPITAL

[Associated Press by Fed. Wireless.]
SAN MATEO, Aug. 20.—Walter G. Smith, formerly editor of the Hawaiian Star and the Advertiser, died last night in the hospital here last night. He was brought here a few days ago, suffering from the effects of a paralytic stroke, which had occurred on the train while en route to the coast from his home in Sherburne, New York.

Walter Gifford Smith was born in Sherburne, Chenango county, New York, on July 23, 1859. Before reaching his majority Mr. Smith had studied at the Brooklyn Polytechnic, various private schools and the Highland Military academy at Worcester, Massachusetts, where he was a classmate of the late Frederick Remington, the artist and author.

Arriving in Honolulu during stormy days and engaged in the newspaper business he easily exchanged the sanctum of the platform, and his "war speech," which was quoted with others in a congressional document, had much to do with aligning the citizens of Honolulu in armed opposition to President Cleveland's policy of restoring the queen. Throughout he was active in public affairs. He was an officer of the Citizen's Guard, chairman of the executive committee of the American league, a member of the enrollment committee of the Annexation club, a member of the commission named by President Dole to draft the Constitution of the Republic of Hawaii, and he received a nomination from both political organizations for a vacancy in the Advisory Council, the legislature of that day, from which, at the request of the directors of his papers, he withdrew. The time was an exciting one, and many attempts were made, one of them by Claus Spreckels, to throttle the Star and its radical editor, but none of them succeeded.

When things began to quiet down and island affairs lost their interest to Mr. Smith, he returned to the coast. On his departure the American league presented him with an address recounting and praising his service to the American cause.

He left Honolulu in May, 1894, and spent the next few years with the San Francisco Chronicle, first as assistant city editor, then as chief editorial writer. He also lectured in California on his war experiences. In 1899, however, he returned to Honolulu to take the editorship of the Advertiser.

In 1908 Mr. Smith became vice president of the board of regents of the College of Hawaii. In 1909 Mr. Smith's health, which had been failing for three years, led him to resign and return to the coast. He again became an editorial writer on the Chronicle and later on the Argonaut, but after an absence of a year and a half he felt well enough to return to Honolulu once more as editor of the Hawaiian Star, the paper he helped to found.

In June 1912, Mr. Smith resigned his position on the Star and went to the coast as lecturer for the Hawaiian Promotion Committee. He was engaged in this work when he suffered the paralytic stroke that culminated in his death.

A MESSAGE TO THIN, WEAK, SCRAWNY FOLKS

An Easy Way to Gain 10 to 30 lbs. of Solid, Healthy, Permanent Flesh.

Thin, nervous, undeveloped men and women everywhere are heard to say, "I can't understand why I do not get fat. I eat plenty of good, nourishing food." The reason is just this: You cannot get fat, no matter how much you eat, unless your digestive organs assimilate the fat making elements of your food instead of passing them out through the body as waste.

What is needed is a means of gently urging the assimilative function of the stomach and intestines to absorb the oils and fats and hand them over to the blood, where they may reach the starved, shrunken, run-down tissues and build them up. The thin person's body is like a dry sponge—eager and hungry for the fatty materials of which it is being deprived by the failure of the alimentary canal to take them from the food. The best way to overcome this sinful waste of flesh building elements and to stop the leakage of fats is to use Sargol, the recently discovered regenerative force that is recommended so highly by physicians here and abroad. Take a little Sargol tablet with every meal and notice how quickly your cheeks fill out and rolls of firm, healthy flesh are deposited over your body, covering each bony angle and projecting point.

Caution:—While Sargol has produced remarkable results in overcoming nervous dyspepsia and general stomach troubles, it should not be taken unless you are willing to gain ten pounds or more, for it is a wonderful flesh-builder. For sale by Benson, Smith & Co., Chambers Drug Co., and Hollister Drug Co.—advertisement.

The Veracious Verger—"In the far corner lies William the Conqueror; behind the organ, where you can't see 'em, are the tombs of Guy Fawkes, Robin Hood, and Cardinal Wolsey. Now, does that guidebook, as I see you 'are in your' and tell who is lying 'ere, sir?' The Skeptical Tourist—"No, but I can guess."

One of the German cruisers that have been patrolling the Pacific coast, keeping clear of all other craft, has been seen by one of the Matson liners. The Russian fleet is said to be scouring the Baltic sea and rounding up foreign merchantmen of belligerent nations. Twenty have been captured up to date.

WALTER G. SMITH ALWAYS WHERE 'THINGS DOING'

Friends and acquaintances of Walter G. Smith, who died last night in San Mateo, Calif., are today recounting many stories illustrative of his independence of character and unique personality.

One of them relates to his early career in newspaper work. After graduation at Cornell in the early '80s he became editor of a newspaper in Mechanicsville, N. Y. In May, 1881, Senators Roscoe Conkling and Thomas C. Platt suddenly resigned, owing to differences of opinion with President Garfield on a question of patronage and both went out for reelection, making a campaign that for bitterness has seldom been equaled. The young Mechanicsville editor signaled his entrance into the field by suddenly turning his paper from a "Stalwart" to a "Half-Breed" journal. Mr. Smith used to remark that after this he was "run out" of Mechanicsville, but it is generally believed that he retired with colors flying.

Another characteristic incident is related of his experience in the New York legislature, to which he was elected in 1888. Warner Miller was out for reelection to the United States senate and all of Smith's political associates voted for him. To the surprise of everyone, Smith voted for the other candidate. Smith at that time was editing a paper in Ithaca, N. Y., and it is related that he soon after left this position.

When asked afterward why he did not vote for Miller, he said, "Nobody asked me to," which was correct for Miller's managers all assumed that he was supporting their man.

"Walter G." as he was very generally known, led an adventurous career as war correspondent in several countries and in times of peace could always be relied upon to stir up something. Once when he was living in San Diego he conceived the idea of starting a revolution in Lower California. Not only did he conceive it, but he made his plans with such force that the Mexican government, becoming alarmed, not only took up the matter with the United States, but sent a warship up to San Diego.

Smith's insurrection was just about to break when its promoter and the presumptive governor-general of Lower California realized that it was up to him to get out of San Diego or get into trouble with the United States federal authorities, backed by Mexico's demand. He took to the mountains without standing on the order of his going, though his friends at the time said that he was in search of health and recreation. Mr. Smith, himself, never made any bones of the fact that his health demanded a sudden getaway from San Diego. The "insurrection" collapsed and after awhile he came out of the mountains.

These are some of the incidents characteristic of his life. His keen tongue and even keener pen could stir up trouble almost at a word. He loved to be where "things were doing," and there was nothing he hated more than monotony or the absence of swift-moving events.

IS McCANDLESS FIGHTING FERN FOR MAYORALTY?

Politicians Hear That Democratic Chief Will Support Wilson Against "Joe"

Political circles buzzed this morning with what seemed like authoritative confirmation of the rumor heard several days ago that John H. Wilson, Democratic national committee-man and strong McCandless supporter, will come out within the next two days as a candidate for mayor, opposing Joseph J. Fern for the Bourbon nomination. The politicians see in this a definite break between McCandless and the Fern element in the party and the prospect of a fight that will last beyond the primaries and into the general campaign.

It is no secret that there is lack of harmony between the McCandless and the Fern followings. Furthermore, as soon as John Bright came out for the nomination for sheriff, opposing Charles Rose, it was looked on as the opening gun of war between the Rose-Fern supporters and the McCandless adherents. Now it is believed that McCandless is strongly urging the Wilson campaign against Fern and a real split is looked for.

Wilson, it is admitted, would have plenty of support if he ran against Fern. Some of the Republicans think that if Wilson comes out John Lane the Republican, is sure of nomination and election.

Get a 10-cent box now.

You're bilious, you have a throbbing sensation in your head, a bad taste in your mouth, your eyes burn, your skin is yellow, with dark rings under your eyes; your lips are parched. No wonder you feel ugly, mean and ill-tempered. Your system is full of bile not properly passed off, and what you need is a cleaning up inside. Don't continue being a bilious nuisance to yourself and those who love you, and don't resort to harsh physics that irritate and injure. Remember that most disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels are cured by morning with gentle, thorough Cascarets—they work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your liver and bowels clean; stomach sweet and your head clear for months. Children love to take Cascarets, because they taste good and never gripe or sicken.—advertisement.

When little Bennie brought the milk in off the front porch one cold morning he found a pillar of the frozen fluid sticking out of the bottle. "Oh, mamma," he cried, "I like our new milkman!" "Is that so? Why?" asked the mother. Showing her the bottle, Bennie exclaimed: "Our old milkman barely filled the bottle, but this one heaps it up."
